- What is the main (if more than one describe each and order by importance) societal problem that your agency / organization is attempting to address?
- Why is it necessary that your organization address this societal problem? (What would happen if they were not there to address it).
- Why is your organization necessary to address this societal problem? (Why is it not addressed by other means?)
- What indicators exist that can be used to track your organization's effectiveness in addressing the problem?
- What resources are used by your organization to address the problem and where do they obtain these resources?
- What other organizations collaborate, complement, cooperate, co-exist, or compete with your organization?
- What programs, policies, projects are used by your organization to address the problem?
 - Are these programs, policies, and projects effective in addressing the problem?
 - Are there other approaches to addressing the problem you think should be tried?
 - Are the more efficient ways of addressing the problem based on the current approaches you think should be tried?

Describe your organization's approach to addressing a societal problem in the form of a Theory of Change

Inputs (what resources are used)	Activities (what is done with these resources)	Outputs (what is produced by these activities)	Outcomes (why are we doing this?)	Impact (what are the long term objectives?)
